no, seriously guys... where?

so, 2.0...

Yes, it's a buzzword.

Library Two Point What?

I tells you sekrit... k?

Library 2.0 is like obscenity.

It is...

- service model, user-centered change
- network effects by default
- user generated content + trust

Is it...

- successfully reaching users?
- evaluated frequently?
- making use of patron/client input?

No more bullet points. Promise.

The image shows three large, cylindrical industrial silos or storage tanks. Each silo has a white, ribbed dome on top. The silos are constructed from a material that appears to be corrugated metal or concrete, with visible horizontal bands. They are set against a clear, bright blue sky. The silos are arranged in a row, with the two larger ones on the left and a smaller one on the right. A thin, vertical metal pipe is attached to the side of the smallest silo. The overall scene is industrial and clean.

Avoid data silos.

Library Tech Tools

This page is a collection technology tools available from the library and free on the internet, that can help make interacting with the library easier for you.

Email & Messaging

Library Email Notification – The Library would prefer to contact you via email (instead of by telephone) when you have something on hold or overdue. If you have not already, please update your account for email notification

LibraryElf.com – This is a company that lets you manage multiple library cards from a single account. You create an account with them, then add the library barcodes and PINs of the library cards you wish to manage, and LibraryElf will email you when books are due, overdue, ready to be picked up, etc. Use their website to sign up (be sure that "Merrimack Valley Library Consortium" is selected in the libraries list)

"Email Me" Bookmarklet [def] – This email function is a little different – it lets you easily send email messages to yourself. You sign up for this service with your email address, add their bookmarklet to your toolbar, and then if you find a website or catalog record you'd like to email to yourself, just click the bookmarklet and it will show up in your inbox

Meebo.com – For instant messaging (IM), users of four different IM services (Yahoo, MSN, AIM and GoogleTalk) to log into their account all from the same website. So, instead of needing to log in to each individually, or needing each service's software installed on the computer you're using, this one website allows access to all four services

Book Lists

The Library does not keep track of the books you check out. This is to protect the privacy of our patrons. However, within our catalog, you can choose to can keep up to 100 books using your account's MyList feature. When using the catalog, login with your barcode and PIN, and then add books to your MyList by clicking the "Add to my list" listed with each book. To review your MyList, click the "MyList" link in the top right corner of the page

LibraryThing.com – This website lets readers easily keep track of the books they read. LibraryThing accounts contain as much or as little personal information as you want, is very easy to add books to, and nicely displays and shares your reading list online

How many ways can you say easy?

A large, 3D concrete letter 'H' is positioned on a paved surface. The letter is reddish-brown and has a hollow center. Overlaid on the letter is the word 'How?' in a large, bold, yellow font with a slight shadow effect. The background shows a mix of asphalt and grass.

usability!

My friend says that cross-country skiing is a good sport because it keeps you humble. Every time you start to get too pleased with yourself, you manage to slip and fall down. I can now say the same for usability testing: doing it is an excellent way to remind yourself that you have not created the pinnacle of user interface design. Luckily, I was pretty sure of that to start out with.

Anyway, yesterday I visited the two other branches of the county library to do some usability testing of the new website I've been working on. I was about to sit down and put together my findings, but it occurred to me that it might be helpful to someone down the line some day if I wrote a little about the whole process.

The book on usability that everyone recommended to me is Don't Make Me Think: A Common Sense Approach to Web Usability by Steve Krug. While under normal circumstances I would be off put by that title (it is, after all, one of my goals to make people think),

Do your own usability testing.

Welcome to the CSUG Home Page!

Canadian Sirsi Users Group

The SirsiDynix logo features a stylized circular icon to the left of the text "SirsiDynix". The icon consists of several curved lines forming a circle. The text "Sirsi" is in a dark blue font, and "Dynix" is in a green font.

The Canadian Sirsi Users' Group was formed for the purpose of acting as a forum for airing, advocating and discussing issues that are strictly or primarily of interest to Canadian libraries using Sirsi products, in particular the Unicorn suite of products. The members meet twice yearly or at other times as appropriate and bring forward issues to Sirsi (now SirsiDynix) for development and improvement. Please see the contact page if you have any questions related to this group.

Web Site Standards and Guidelines for Library Units

Web Site Mission Statement

The OSU Libraries' web site supports the teaching, research and service activities of The Ohio State University students, faculty and staff by providing access to a wide variety of high quality information resources including those developed locally. The site organizes these resources to facilitate efficient use and easy access by a diverse audience. The site extends access to the expertise, services and unique collections that comprise our complex library system.

Adopted January 7, 1999

Guiding Principles

1. The Web site mission statement is meant to guide those responsible for page creation and maintenance in making design and content decisions related to audience, scope, and priorities.
  2. These guidelines are for pages representing departments and libraries that are part of the OSUL system. Generally such pages should exist beneath the following url:
library.osu.edu/sites
  3. The head of each unit is ultimately responsible for the content of the unit site and should be aware of and approve original and substantially revised pages.
  4. The Libraries' Web Services Committee serves as a board of review for OSUL Web pages to ensure consistency with design and policy guidelines developed by the Committee. Any concerns will be discussed with the departments or individuals responsible for the pages. Unresolved issues will be referred to the Assistant Director for Public Services.
  5. Library sites should be in compliance with the general University guidelines.

Requirements

1. Page creators and maintainers should insure accessibility of their pages by a potentially diverse audience including those with varying disabilities. See Ohio State's official Web Accessibility Policy. For additional guidelines and tutorials, see the Web Accessibility Center (WAC) site.
2. Pages should include a page title tag <TITLE> as well as meta-tags (description and keywords), to facilitate indexing and discovery by University and Library search engines.
3. Each site should provide the following content either on the top level page, or linked prominently from the top level page:
  - Name of the library, clearly identified as an OSU Library
  - Address, phone number and e-mail contact for the library
  - A link to the OSUL home page [/]: <http://library.osu.edu>
