

Questions Asked & Answered

lessons learned in the social q&a salt mines

Jessamyn West

<librarian.net/talks/oregon>

10jun11

Thursday, June 9, 2011

I'm one of those people who gets asked "Do you work here" a lot. I used to think it was because I had what I like to call "the open face of reference" but lately I think it's because people can TELL that I like to help, and am passably good at it. The question asking/answering thing is in my blood for good or bad and I have a job where I get to do a lot of it and manage still more of it. This talk is about that job.

I am not really a librarian

or am I?

Thursday, June 9, 2011

First off, I have an MLib from UW and I've done various library jobs, but really my main love is working with computers and this is not enough for a library job in Northern New England, so I do a lot of technology instruction. I live in Randolph VT, I mostly work at the vocational high school staffing a drop-in time and teaching adult ed classes at night. I teach someone to use a mouse once or twice a month. It's a balance, if I lived someplace more urban, I'd have lots of computer/library work.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

In my last regular library job: I did about 85% of an automation project at the Tunbridge Library and we got to the "we're ready to turn the key and start training staff... here is your part" part of it and I waited and waited and it never happened. I stepped down from the project in December 2009 and it's still not done.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

I fill in at the Kimball Public Library in Randolph where I make $8/hour. They try to keep me busy. One of the last times I was there, they gave me the job of wrapping rubber bands around bookends to hold signs for the booksale. No big deal, we all pitch in. I noticed this rubber band...

Where I work

view: admin/standard | welcome back jessamyn | sign out

MetaFilter AskMeFi Projects Music Jobs Podcast IRL MetaTalk Admin

MetaFilter

Sunday, June 5, 2011 11:34

Home FAQ About Archives Tags Popular Search Random
New Post My Profile Preferences Recent Activity Favorites

Recent Posts My Favorites Popular Favorites My Comments Recent Comments

196 links and 12309 comments posted since your last visit

June 5

With the recent rise in interest in traditional printing techniques, from the birth of many new studios to at least one movie in the works, perhaps it is inevitable that something like Apple iPhoto letterpress cards happened. [\[more inside\]](#) posted by Megami at 11:33 - 0 comments - Post a Comment +

Prison party central, Margarita Island, Venezuela. (NYT) posted by Meatbomb at 8:03 - 20 comments \(20 new\) +

A trailer for a British rom-com Love's Kitchen (previously known as No Ordinary Trifle) recently appeared, notable for a cameo by chef Gordon Ramsay playing himself. The reaction was somewhat negative. Perhaps it's no coincidence that the trailer was taken down and replaced with a slightly improved version but handily the original had been reposted here.
posted by fearfulsymmetry at 5:17 - 40 comments \(40 new\) +

Doctor Who, 1980s anime-style. Made by MightyOtaking over four (or so) years.
posted by ArmyOfKittens at 4:55 - 12 comments \(12 new\) +
— 1 comment with 1 flag

Leonard Cohen has been honored with the Prince of Asturias Prize for Letters. His connection to Spain came through his personal interest in the poet and playwright Federico García Lorca. Cohen and García Lorca came together spiritually when the late flamenco singer Enrique Morente (Previous) used their poems as the basis of his seminal 1996 album Omega. (More on Omega \(Spanish\))
At the same time The new Spanish Dictionary of Biography's historical revisions tell us more about what's wrong with Spain now than in the past;
F is for Franco but not for fascist. (It's worth reading down the comments as well).
posted by adamvasco at 4:22 - 6 comments \(6 new\) +

Ray Briebesca: "Crazy Shots" (via "60 Minutes" video extra) Interview of "60 Minutes" correspondent Lara Logan highlighting Ray Briebesca, the Vietnam War veteran responsible for some amazing combat footage. [\[more inside\]](#) posted by InsertNiftyNameHere at 3:45 - 8 comments \(8 new\) +

Take Five, written by Paul Desmond and recorded at Sachal Studios, Lahore, Pakistan. Some other cover versions: By a 12 year old harpist Benjamin Creighton Griffiths. By The Tempo Vivace string quartet. Live at concert by Azerbaijani singer Aziza Mustafa Zadeh. By the Swedish singer Monica Zetterlund (1962) [\[more inside\]](#) posted by growabrain at 2:16 - 22 comments \(22 new\) +

Ads via The DECK (hide)

Contact Activity (hide):

- Meatbomb posted Venezuelan party prison to MetaFilter. 3 hours ago
- chococat posted They Don't Run Your Life to MeFi Music. 10 hours ago
- adipocere had a best answer in Movie ID Filter: Colored... 12 hours ago
- rtha added babby; Drop table users; -- as a contact. 12 hours ago
- Lyn Never added toastedbeagle as a contact. 14 hours ago
- brundiefly added piratebowling as a contact. 15 hours ago
- donajo had a best answer in How can I describe the robes... 15 hours ago
- cortex had a comment with 12 favorites in MetaTalk. 18 hours ago
- Sys Rq had a best

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Suffice to say I don't make ends meet with library work. Since 2004 I've also had one of those online jobs people covet so much. I am the COO or community manager for a group blog called MetaFilter.com It's a big group blog where people share neat stuff they found on the web. Think something like LISNews or maybe BoingBoing that anyone can post to. We have more registered users than live in any one city in Vermont, 52,983. Probably 53K by the time I am saying these words.

Where I spend my time

The image shows a screenshot of the Ask MetaFilter website. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for MetaFilter, AskMeFi, Projects, Music, Jobs, Podcast, IRL, MetaTalk, and Admin. Below this, the site title 'Ask MetaFilter' is displayed, along with the date 'Sunday, June 5, 2011 11:59'. A secondary navigation bar includes links for Home, FAQ, Archives, Tags, Search, and Random. A third bar contains 'New Question', 'My Profile', 'Preferences', 'Recent Activity', and 'Favorites'. On the right side, there are tabs for 'Recent Posts', 'My Favorites', 'Popular Favorites', 'Answered', 'Unanswered', and 'My Ask'. A status bar indicates '28 questions and 360 answers posted since your last visit'. The main content area shows a list of questions from June 5, 2011, including topics like 'Are there any good, clear English language online dictionaries about and following the same principles?', 'DSLR 101: filter: thinking of getting a classmate who has been in a DSLR camera, but a friend pointed out that I don't know what I want', 'How can I mass forward Hotmail emails to either Yahoo or GMail?', 'Can somebody explain the current conservative talking point "China Has Divested 97% of Its Holdings In U.S. Treasury Bills" to me?', 'Any resources for finding a weekend cottage for a large group on a budget in Kent, UK?', 'Vegan Chili Filter: Help me to make my chili taste like more than boiled beans with an overlay of spices!', and 'Fly-killing window stickers: potentially allergenic?'. On the right side, there are two sidebars: '20 most popular tags in the past month' and 'Posts by category in the past month'. A large, bold, red number '182,350' is overlaid in the center of the page, representing the total number of questions asked since the site opened in December 2003.

182,350

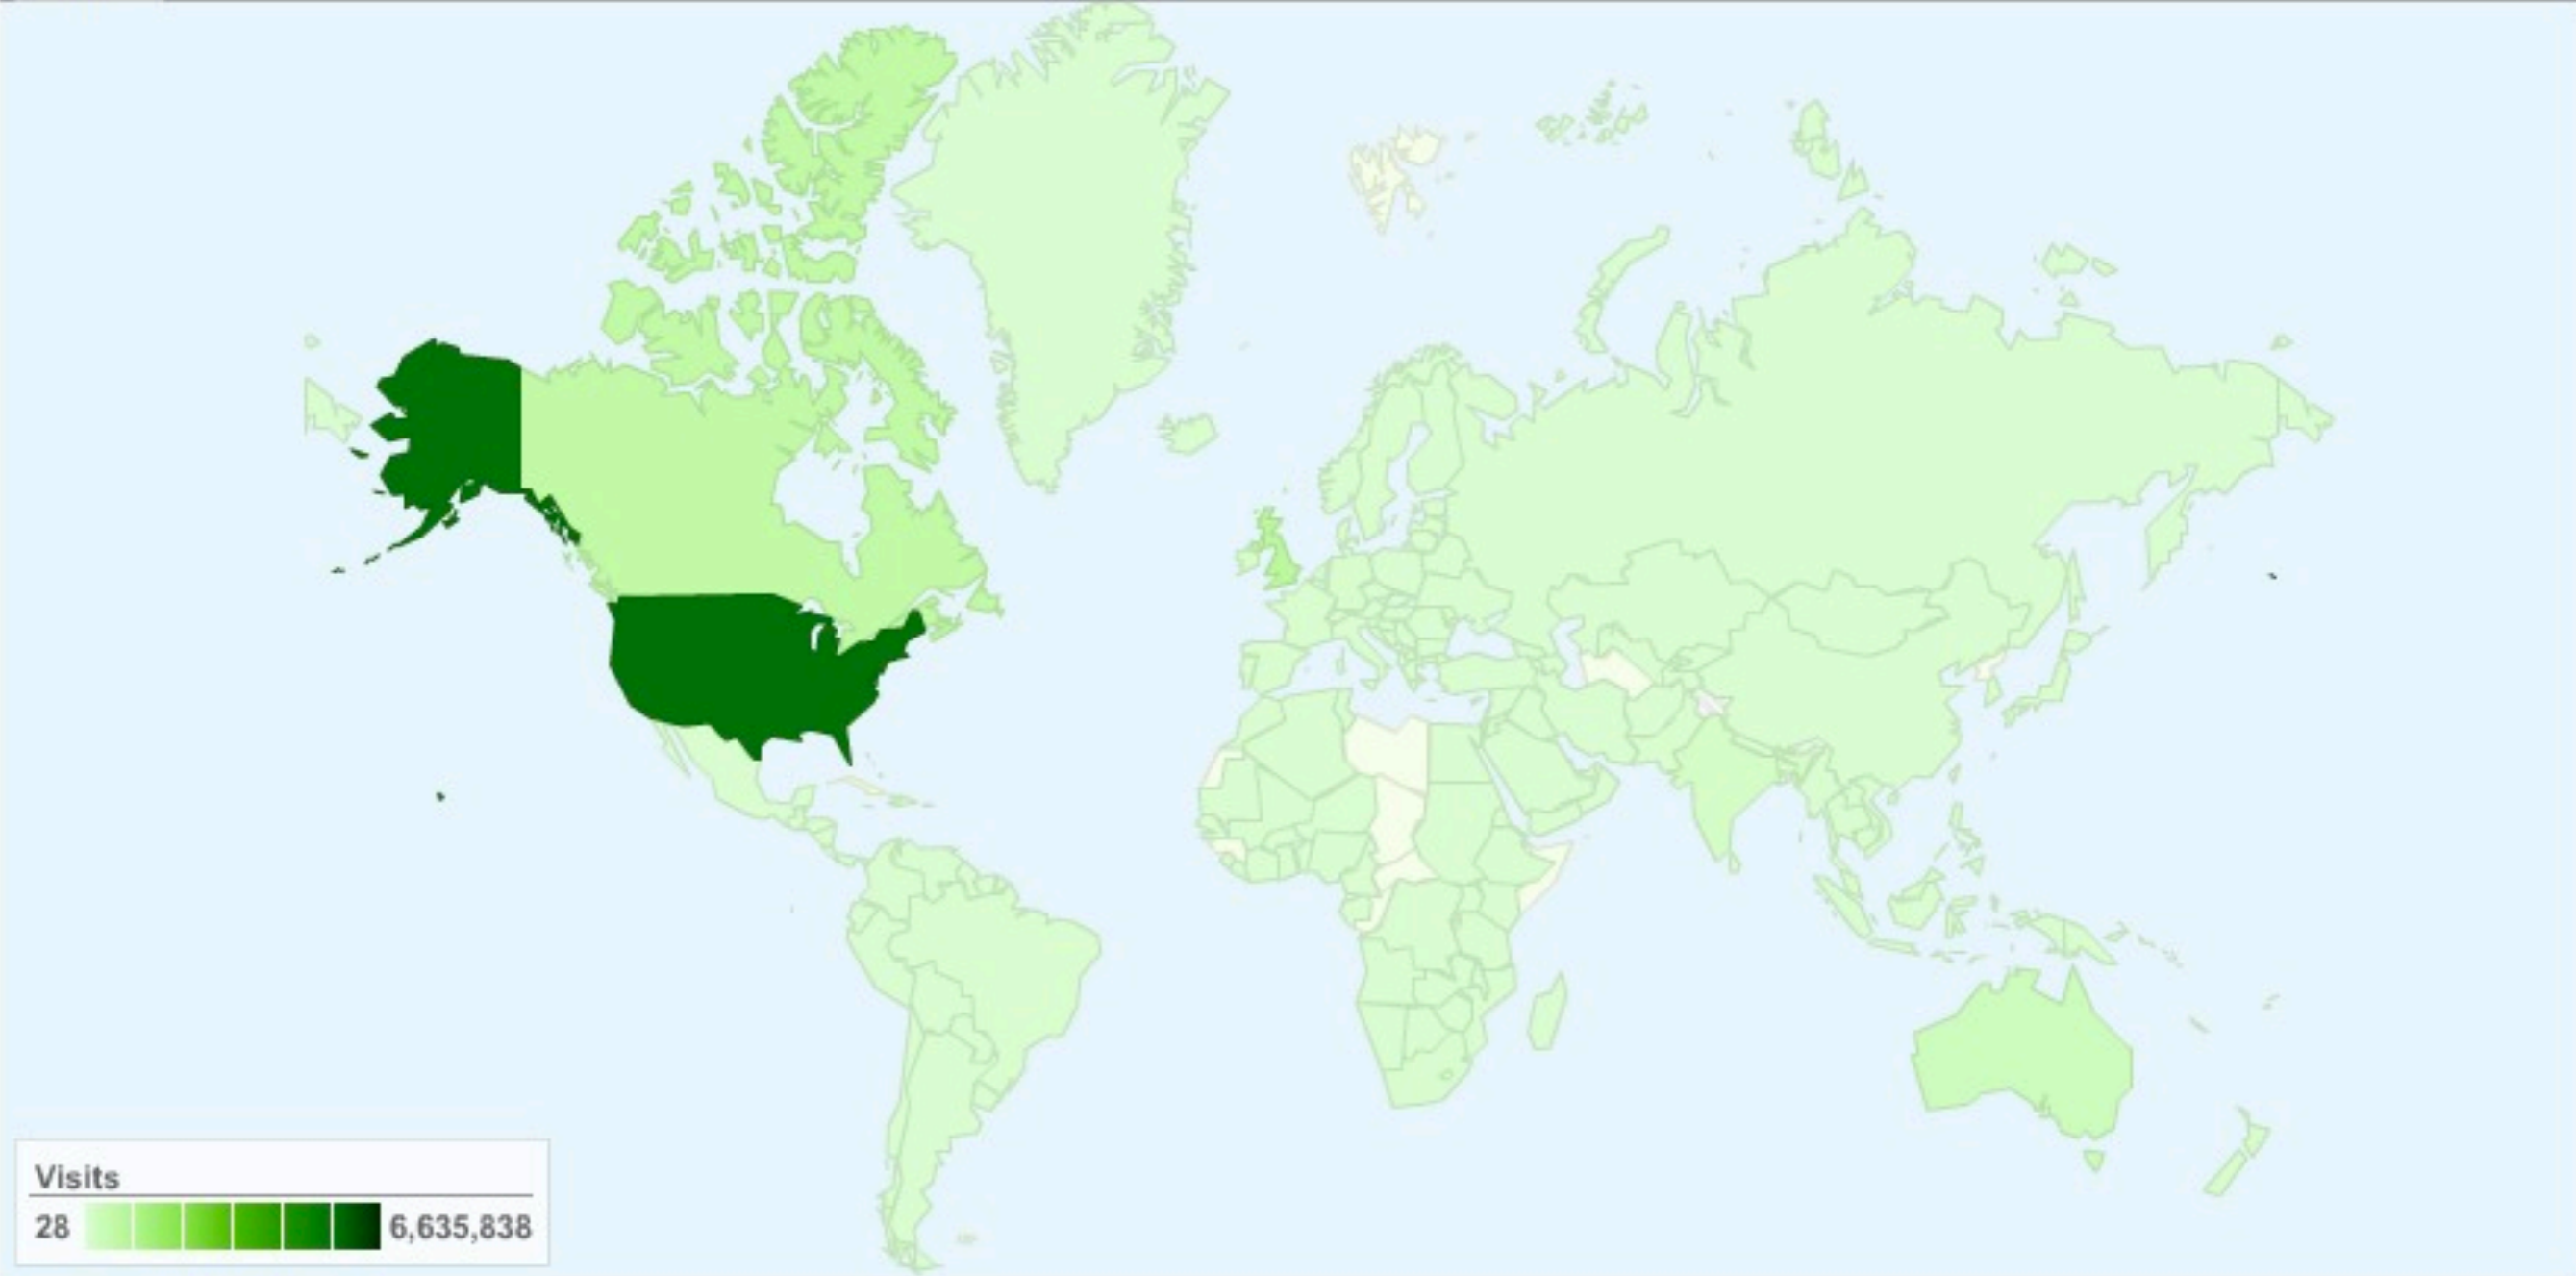

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Ask MetaFilter is the part of the site where I spend the most times. It's a "Q&A site" like ones you may have heard of: Yahoo Answers, Quora, vark. 182,350 questions asked since the site opened in December 2003. About 2K questions a month.

Map Overlay

May 5, 2011 - Jun 5, 2011

Visits

10,288,782 visits came from 196 countries/territories in the "Ask" segment

Detail Level: City | Country/Territory | Sub Continent Region | Continent Dimension: None

Thursday, June 9, 2011

We have a lot of "viewers" too, or lurkers. That is, unlogged in users who find us through Google. Here's a month's worth of visits. 461,000 pageviews/day or 320,000 visits/day. And in case you were wondering Google's ad sense provides almost all of our income. Enough to support five full-timers.

AskMe by the numbers

have not asked a question

have asked a
question

Thursday, June 9, 2011

We have data. Numbers galore. We make all of our non-personal data available via a tool called the InfoDumpster, sort of an API but not really. We have also extracted the text from the site into a nearly 500 million word corpus. Want to do research? We'll help you out. 200 million words of Q&A. Here's a few numbers to start: of the 24,788 people who have used the AskMe part of the site, 17,681 have asked a question.

Sample question

Movie ID Filter: Colored Bodies?

June 4, 2011 23:06  Subscribe

Asking for a friend: vaguely remembered movie filter. Something about bodies and colors...

- Futuristic setting, although friend (in her early 20s) thinks that the technology in the film looked "really old"
- Bodies were tagged with colors and depending on their color something happened to them
- Very serious female doctor or nurse
- Strong medical/anatomical themes/visuals
- Perhaps a kid (or someone/something) causes a mix up with the body labels and something bad happens

Thanks!

posted by bug138 to media & arts (5 answers total) [\[edit\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[add to favorites\]](#) 1 user marked this as a favorite [\[!\]](#)

A reach, but could it be Logan's Run?

posted by  bluedaisy at 23:09 on June 4 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[1 favorite +\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

The made-for-TV version of Brave New World?

posted by Nomyte at 23:16 on June 4 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

In Overdrawn at the Memory Bank, a 1983 public television adaptation of a John Varley story, a child on a field trip mischievously switches a routing tag for someone's body and sends them off for sexual reassignment. The switch occurs at 22:04 to 22:07 in this video.

The film was rightly later torn to shreds on Mystery Science Theater 3000.

posted by  adipocere at 23:26 on June 4 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

Amazing, adipocere, we would have never gotten it in a million years!

Watching now, it is amazingly bad.

posted by bug138 at 0:22 on June 5 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

Tags:

movieid [\[x\]](#)

scifi [\[x\]](#)

moviefilter [\[x\]](#)

movie [\[x\]](#)

film [\[x\]](#)

Add tag

Share:

 Twitter

 Facebook

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Here's what "asking a question" entails. I know what people say a lot "But yeah look at Yahoo answers, those answers are terrible" and I agree it's hit or miss. But here's a good example. Note this question was asked at 11:06 on a Saturday night and answered correctly at 11:26. Here are some of the features we've built over the years: tags, rss feeds, best answers, comment by the "OP", favorites. Take a look at that little blue dot next to the username, I'll talk about that later.

Sample question

Movie ID Filter: Colored Bodies?

June 4, 2011 23:06 Subscribe

Asking for a friend: vaguely remembered movie filter. Something about bodies and colors...

- Futuristic setting, although friend (in her early 20s) thinks that the technology in the film looked "really old"
- Bodies were tagged with colors and depending on their color something happened to them
- Very serious female doctor or nurse
- Strong medical/anatomical themes/visuals
- Perhaps a kid (or someone/something) causes a mix up with the body labels and something bad happens

Thanks!

posted by bug138 to media & arts (5 answers total) [\[edit\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[add to favorites\]](#) 1 user marked this as a favorite [\[!\]](#)

A reach, but could it be Logan's Run?

posted by bluedaisy at 23:09 on June 4 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[1 favorite +\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

The made-for-TV version of Brave New World?

posted by Nomyte at 23:16 on June 4 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

In Overdrawn at the Memory Bank, a 1983 public television adaptation of a John Varley story, a child on a field trip mischievously switches a routing tag for someone's body and sends them off for sexual reassignment. The switch occurs at 22:04 to 22:07 in this video.

The film was rightly later torn to shreds on Mystery Science Theater 3000.

posted by adipocere at 23:26 on June 4 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

Amazing, adipocere, we would have never gotten it in a million years!

Watching now, it is amazingly bad.

posted by bug138 at 0:22 on June 5 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

Tags:

movieid [\[x\]](#)

scifi [\[x\]](#)

moviefilter [\[x\]](#)

movie [\[x\]](#)

film [\[x\]](#)

Add tag

Share:

Twitter

Facebook

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Here's what "asking a question" entails. I know what people say a lot "But yeah look at Yahoo answers, those answers are terrible" and I agree it's hit or miss. But here's a good example. Note this question was asked at 11:06 on a Saturday night and answered correctly at 11:26. Here are some of the features we've built over the years: tags, rss feeds, best answers, comment by the "OP", favorites. Take a look at that little blue dot next to the username, I'll talk about that later.

AskMe by the numbers

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Here's one that's even more interesting, to me. Out of these same people, 24077 have answered a question. 97%

Asking/answering is iterative

Pilot Filter

June 3, 2011 22:42  Subscribe

How long will it take to fly from southwestern Michigan to Rochester, Minnesota in a Cessna Skylane (piston-single)? As a passenger should I observe the same security measures I do when flying commercial airlines? (Cosmetics in a single bag, no pen knife, etc.)

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And since we use a blog format, the q&a aspect is iterative. Questioners can take the answers they get and add more information. We try to keep this from getting too chatty.

Asking/answering is iterative

Yeah, you'll feel turbulence much more strongly in a plane that small. If you like roller coasters and things (as I do!), you'll find it fun; if you get motion sick, as advised above, definitely take some Dramamine.

posted by bassjump at 12:45 on June 4 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [user info] [+] [!]

I do get motion sick, even on big planes, so I'll have my Dramamine ready and avoid the Double-Stuffs for sure!

posted by tangram1 at 15:22 on June 4 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [user info] [+] [!]

If you do experience an onset of motion sickness, try to sit straight/comfortably, breath deeper/normally and keep your eyes up at the horizon. Also, you can ask for more fresh air, which is easy for the pilot to accommodate). Still, eyes on the horizon is the most important thing.

posted by meinvt at 16:39 on June 4 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [user info] [+] [!]

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And since we use a blog format, the q&a aspect is iterative. Questioners can take the answers they get and add more information. We try to keep this from getting too chatty.

Find questions you want

My Ask MeFi Preferences

Choose your favorite categories:

- clothing, beauty, & fashion
- computers & internet
- education
- food & drink
- grab bag
- health & fitness
- home & garden
- human relations
- law & government
- media & arts
- pets & animals
- religion & philosophy
- science & nature
- shopping
- society & culture
- sports, hobbies, & recreation
- technology
- travel & transportation
- work & money
- writing & language

Enter a list of your favorite tags separated by spaces:

library rural vermont family anarchist technology internet jokes

Suggestions: relationships sex travel dating relationship books health marriage music work love food family internet etiquette money law women library car book anxiety children history job

Set Preferences

1.categories

2.tags

3.suggestions

Thursday, June 9, 2011

MyAsk is a feature where people can enter a few categories and it will deliver a custom view of the questions so you can see what interests you, and get an RSS feed if you want. Discovery layer stuff.

Find questions that need answering

Recent Posts

My Favorites

Popular Favorites

Answered

Unanswered

My Ask

7 questions and 86 answers posted since your last visit

Thursday, June 9, 2011

We also have a few “special” tags like the stumped tag and the resolved tag if you’re someone that just likes answering toughies, or if you want the feed of things that all turned out okay. 24 questions were marked “stumped” in 2010.

Find questions that need answering

May 16

The online database tool DabbleDB is closing up shop this Wednesday. It's a great tool - excellent ui, cloud availability for data entry and access, easy RSS feeds. Any recommendations on another tool that offers the same? I've looked at Zoho and found it inferior in every way.

posted by boombot to computers & internet at 11:51 - 0 answers

Recent Posts

My Favorites

Popular Favorites

Answered

Unanswered

My Ask

7 questions and 86 answers posted since your last visit

May 11

Nolo is a great source for books when one is looking to deal with the legal aspects of running a small or medium business. Is there a publisher that specializes in accounting / bookkeeping / finances books?

posted by mmdei to work & money at 19:05 - 0 answers

May 6

Is there a way to read Microsoft Tag barcodes with a computer program? I don't own a smartphone but I'd still like to be able to use them when I come across them.

posted by flatluigi to technology at 14:43 - 0 answers

Thursday, June 9, 2011

We also have a few “special” tags like the stumped tag and the resolved tag if you’re someone that just likes answering toughies, or if you want the feed of things that all turned out okay. 24 questions were marked “stumped” in 2010.

My social work

view: admin/standard | welcome back jessamyn | sign out

MetaFilter AskMeFi Projects Music Jobs Podcast IRL MetaTalk Admin

MetaFilter

Sunday, June 5, 2011 11:37

Home FAQ About Archives Tags Popular Search Random
New Post My Profile Preferences Recent Activity Favorites

jessamyn's profile \(website\) edit profile [\[edit account\]](#)

search activity

Info

Name: jessamyn charity west
Email: jessamyn@gmail.com
Birthday: September 5
Location: vermont
Occupation: librarian superhero
Gender: thundersweater
Status: box turtle is my co-pilot
IM: msn G skype icq y
Also On: cs cs L in t W f
Joined: January 28, 2000

Contributions

MeFi: 90 posts, 3027 comments
MetaTalk: 66 posts, 12335 comments
Ask MeFi: 43 questions, 8855 answers
Music: 2 posts, 120 comments, 2 playlists
Music Talk: 0 posts, 0 comments
Projects: 3 posts, 60 comments, 97 votes
Jobs: 1 post
IRL: 1 post, 33 comments

View all activity

Favorites: 1664
Favorited by others: 40082

Social

Links to: 696 users
Linked by: 711 users

MeFi tags: obit (5) obituary (5) history (4) poetry (4) vermont (4)
art (3) libraries (3) music (3) youtube (3) canada (2)

Ask MeFi tags: software (4) travel (4) email (3) australia (2) blog (2)
excel (2) gmail (2) laptop (2) mac (2) vacation (2)

Nearby users: FauxScot (2 miles) Mblue (2 miles) terrapin (10 miles)
turtlegirl (10 miles) deCadmus (21 miles) SirStan (22 miles)
meinvt (23 miles) GodricVT (23 miles) rossmeissl (24 miles)
VTscapes (25 miles) and 55 others

About

What's the deal with your nickname? How did you get it? If your nickname is self-explanatory, then tell everyone when you first started using the internet, and what was the first thing that made you say "wow, this isn't just a place for freaks after all?" Was it a website? Was it an email from a long-lost friend? Go on, spill it.

- * Hey, I wrote a book
- * about the chicken fucking
- * Cooter Clock is done.

I like the new interface, but I also like the old interface: AskMe, MeFi, MeTa

My username is just my name. I have always been painfully literal. My other website with less personal junk is librarian.net. I made a new portal of sorts at jessamyn.info, or you can check the Wikipedia entry for more

Thursday, June 9, 2011

As an aside: We're sort of a social network in that people can "friend" each other and there's a heavy meetup component to what we do, so much so that we launched a part of the site called IRL helping people plan over 100 meetups per month. This is my profile page, it links to my profiles on other social networks, shows who I am linked to. I've met 490 users of the site. Not much as a percentage, but not bad. My feeling about social technology is that if it's not helping you do something in your "real life" [if you'll excuse my slang: "get laid or get paid" as the kids today say] it's maybe not solving a problem for you. It's easy to hide from the offline world in the online world. I think about this a lot.

Examples of art censorship?

I saw a great talk at a recent library conference called America's War on Sex. One of the examples the speaker gave was how, when there had been a recent art defacement, the painting of two women when shown on the nightly news, had the breasts of the women covered up. So while this isn't censorship per se, this is definitely one of those weird "Hey it's okay to show it in an art museum, but when it's on the nightly news it's suddenly porn" situations. What we often see in the library... [\[more\]](#)

posted to Ask Metafilter by jessamyn at 14:18 on May 8, 2011 IP:[whois|search] [+]

Ouch!

Sinusitis sounds likely. Think about what you do that makes it feel worse [bending over, touching it, &c] and if there's anything you do that makes it feel better [staying hydrated, steamy showers, &c]. Sinus problems are usually not that big a deal. Your doc will likely try to figure out if you have sinus pressure because of a cold or whether you have a sinus infection. If your snot is greenish or brownish later in the day [often morning snot is darker because you're dehydrated] you... [\[more\]](#)

posted to Ask Metafilter by jessamyn at 14:08 on May 8, 2011 IP:[whois|search] [+]

help me make technology empowering

Hi, I sort of do this for a job and I recently wrote a book about how to do sort of specifically this. Basically technology instruction in libraries is a really complicated thing since you've got patron expectations, institutional expectations and often don't have too much control over either. People who aren't using computers in 2011 are usually this way for a reason. Often it's because they're from another country or don't have access to technology and broadband. However, other times it's... [\[more\]](#)

posted to Ask Metafilter by jessamyn at 13:58 on May 7, 2011 IP:[whois|search] [4 favorites +]

Looking for sleep-inducing podcasts

My SO really really likes falling asleep to the BBC World Service, though he just tunes it in on the radio. Newsy, measured, very rarely excitable. It is sort of current affairs, but if you listen to the current affairs of countries you don't know much about, it's sort of interesting [to me] in a non-urgent way.

posted to Ask Metafilter by jessamyn at 12:50 on May 7, 2011 IP:[whois|search] [3 favorites +]

Ask MeFi: 43 questions , 8855 answers

Thursday, June 9, 2011

All this Q&A is categorized, tagged and archived. I've answered about 8800 questions (actually fewer because I'm also the mod so some of those numbers are "stop hollering at each other" comments) and you can click through and see all of my answers. I'd love it if my library could do that. Here's a quick look at the categories. A lot of what keeps people coming to the site is the reputation they've established.

Gamification

Please tell me what you know about maintaining septic systems.
comment posted at 11:13 AM on Jun-6-11

Favorites: 5017

Favorited by others: 6670

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And we have a gamification aspect. Favorites and best answers. We try to downplay these, but they're like the food pellets that keep the site going, keep interest high and allow positive feedback in a limited way. 1,840,421 favorites given in AskMe. The thing that amazes me the most is how all these people do all this work for free. 66,871 questions have at least one best answer. 161,736 best answers have been given.

Gamification

Can you use those oil blotters throughout the day to help keep your forehead (and therefore your bangs) dry?

posted by litnerd at 10:25 on June 9 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

i live in a non-humid non-sweaty area (northern california), so this may not be as effective for you, but i keep my bangs from clumping by dusting a liberal amount of translucent powder on my forehead before going out for the day.

posted by apostrophe at 10:30 on June 9 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

These are my three tricks, and sometimes they're defeated by the triple-digit days of Texas summer:

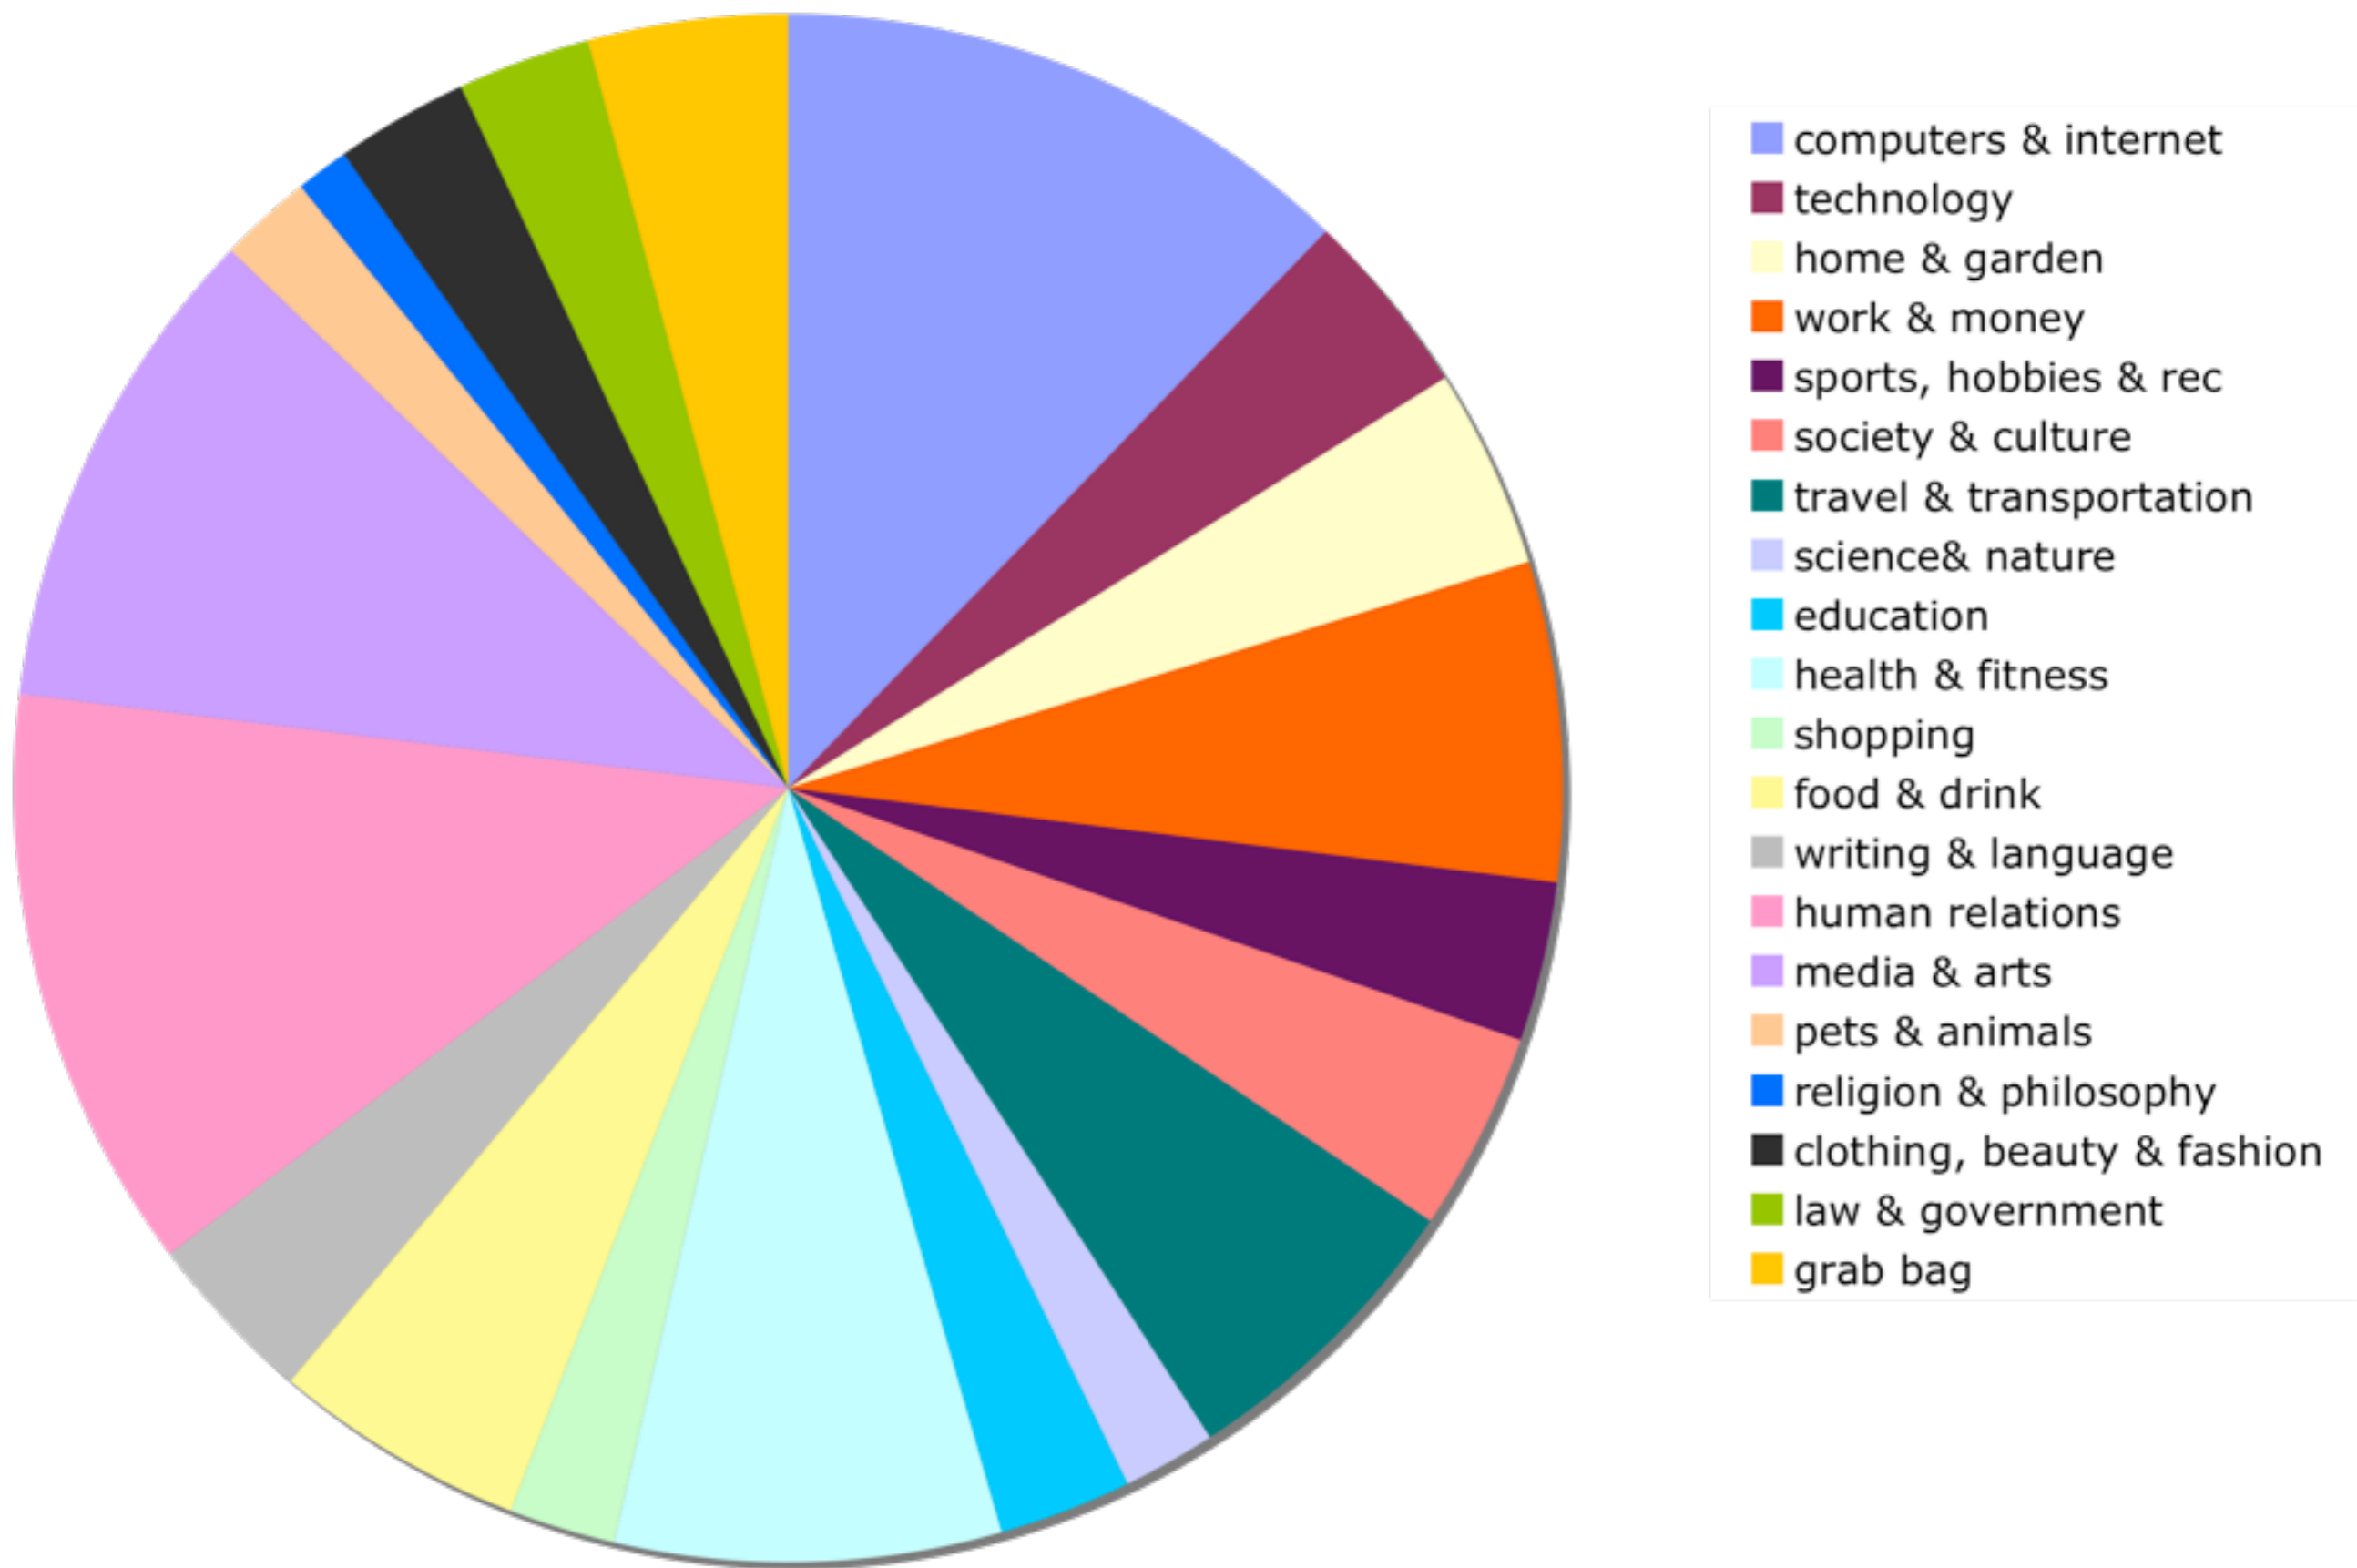

- 1) Bangs as short as possible
- 2) Wash every day, and blow them dry with a round brush, they seem to remember that :]
- 3) Carry a comb

I wear a bike helmet, and they still aren't too bad as long as I have a comb with me.

posted by fiercecupcake at 10:36 on June 9 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And we have a gamification aspect. Favorites and best answers. We try to downplay these, but they're like the food pellets that keep the site going, keep interest high and allow positive feedback in a limited way. 1,840,421 favorites given in AskMe. The thing that amazes me the most is how all these people do all this work for free. 66,871 questions have at least one best answer. 161,736 best answers have been given.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

We set up our categories when we set up the site in 2004 [with the help of an information architect you might have heard of: Jesse James Garrett] and they've stayed more or less the same the whole time. I think we added fitness to the health category. You can tell you're doing categories okay if the "grab bag" one isn't overflowing.

My toolbox

MetaFilter AskMeFi Projects Music Jobs Podcast MetaTalk

MetaFilter Admin

<3 you are the smiling buddha

- EDIT MALL | CHARTS
- last 100 flags
- charts
- admin: activity, notes, labs
- post to sidebar, music challenge
- MeMail search

Pending: anon askmefi, projects

FAQ: Add a question | View submissions

THINK SAFETY

0 days

since a bannin'

Search for:

cf uptime: 1 day, 8 hours, 42 minutes.
main free: C: 23%, D: 84% | db free: C: 44%, D: 88%

flag hotspots (last 100)

2 mefi	97274	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	other
1 mefi	97254	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	breaks guidelines, other
1 mefi	97273	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	other
1 mefi	97264	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	other
1 mefi	97271	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	fantastic post, other
1 mefi_comment	3357530	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	offensive/sexism/racism
1 mefi_comment	3357508	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	noise
1 mefi_comment	3357500	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	noise
1 mefi_comment	3357438	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	offensive/sexism/racism
1 askmefi	169517	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	display error

good spots

3 mefi_comment	3356727	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	fantastic comment
3 mefi_comment	3356320	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	fantastic comment
2 mefi_comment	3355605	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	fantastic comment

Thursday, June 9, 2011

So that's great, a big question archive. But that's not really what I do. I check in via a web interface and answer emails, fix people's comments, chime in on policy issues with my co-moderators and occasionally time people out or ban them. The place is really part Craigslist and part Yahoo answers. Our main admin page has a lot of searching tools and a few other things. We call the place "self-policing" and there are a few ways that works. People can flag things that break the guidelines and there's a whole part of the site dedicated to policy issues.

AskMe by the numbers

questions
deleted

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And we keep data on this sort of thing too. In MetaFilter proper we mostly just don't let people use racial slurs, make rape jokes or "out" each other. In AskMe the moderation is a little heavier. We occasionally delete questions for being chatty, hypotheticals, non-questions, rants disguised as questions, revenge questions, illegal questions and questions about suicide.

AskMe by the numbers

comments
deleted

Thursday, June 9, 2011

The number of comments deleted is similar, 47,008 out of 2,586,924.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Here's a category view of the same data, the little green bars are deletions. You can get your answer deleted for not answering the question, for calling someone an asshole, for making a joke, for going after someone [you see this a lot in pet and parenting threads] lots of reasons. A little under 2%. We don't do much of it, but enough that people notice and enough that that part of the site is called "heavily moderated" You can sort of see how Human Relations seems to get a lot of those.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Here's a category view of the same data, the little green bars are deletions. You can get your answer deleted for not answering the question, for calling someone an asshole, for making a joke, for going after someone [you see this a lot in pet and parenting threads] lots of reasons. A little under 2%. We don't do much of it, but enough that people notice and enough that that part of the site is called "heavily moderated" You can sort of see how Human Relations seems to get a lot of those.

What is the problem to be solved?

- ▶ "Does someone feel like I do?"
- ▶ "Am I correct in this argument I am having?"
- ▶ "Is there a way out of this mess?"
- ▶ "Am I being unreasonable?"
- ▶ "Is this person acting crazy?"

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Human relations questions are often tricky because while they seem to be about something, they're often about something else. "How do I get my friends to split the bill evenly" when the question is "Are my friends jerks?" Astute listeners will often address the hidden questions which is good news or bad news depending. No one wants the answer to "Am I being unreasonable?" to be "yes" but sometimes... people are being unreasonable... in their relationships, at their jobs, with their bowling league. Often it's as simple as them saying something like "therapy is not an option" when maybe that's what they need. We try to keep people being concrete.

questions are personal

So... I'm fat! Still wanna meet up?

December 6, 2008 9:38  Subscribe

I need to gracefully let someone I've spoken with on the phone, and who I'm developing feelings for, know that I'm kind of fat before we meet in person. How can I do this? Please AskMe help me work out what to say and how to say it.

Backstory

I'm a girl, he's a guy. A mutual friend introduced us and we've been chatting on the phone. I definitely did not expect to develop feelings for him other than friendship. As far as I know, neither did he. So when we started talking appearance wasn't really an issue. But we unexpectedly hit it off and gradually, over a couple of weeks, feelings have developed.

It's only gradually dawned on me that he likes me as more than a friend. Long conversations and texts have escalated into jokes about what are you wearing and, uh, jokes about phone sex and how much he likes my voice and wants to meet me. In fact, he's said about four times now that he really wants to meet me. Now it's hit me, hard, that I do like him a lot 'like that' and would like to meet him too.

Complications

Despite the strong indications that he also likes me a lot, it's still at that awkward stage where everything has been implied and nothing has been said outright. Complicating things even further, we can't meet face to face for at least another three months. We live about 1800 miles apart and for a variety of reasons neither of us can travel for a while.

I know being overweight can be a deal breaker and I need to let him know that I'm, well, fat, before spending weeks talking with him on the phone, both of us getting attached and then him being (possibly) horrified when he meets me.

He's seen pics of me (Facebook) so he knows what my face looks like. You can tell I'm not, you know, Jessica Alba. You can't tell that I'm quite fat. I'm 5'3 and 163 pounds. None of it is muscle. Quite a bit of it is boobs. And bum. And belly and thighs. I don't need to be levered out of the house by crane and I shop in the normal sizes part of the store, but I am definitely hefty.

Halp

I just... can't think of a way to bring this up that's not hideous awkward. Everything I think of to say is just so cringe-y. And makes me sound like I'm really insecure about how I look. (Which, I kind of am, truthfully.) And now that I've realised I LIKE him, I feel very awkward too, which isn't helping.

Tags:

fat [x]

love [x]

conundrum [x]

resolved [x]

Add tag

Share:

 Twitter

 Facebook

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Sometimes questions are super personal. We have a capacity for asking "anonymous" questions. People can email the mods with follow-up responses. The questions are anonymous even in the database, though we can figure out who asked them if there is a real problem. This question is a classic anon question [explain story] and professional...

Tracking Down An Address In 1939 Vienna

October 18, 2005 10:22  Subscribe

How can I get my hands on a Vienna phonebook from circa 1938? I will be spending a weekend in Vienna next month, and I would love to see the apartment where my late grandfather lived before fleeing the Nazis. Unfortunately, nobody in the family knows the address, and there aren't any letters or other documents to provide it. Things are also complicated by the fact that I won't be visiting on a weekday, so any archives that might have this information will presumably be closed. Plus, I don't speak German. Am I out of luck, or is there any way to track this information down in the next few weeks?

posted by yankeefog to human relations (39 answers total) [\[edit\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[add to favorites\]](#) 87 users marked this as a favorite [\[!\]](#)

— flagged 1 time

— 4 comments with 5 flags

Tags:

vienna [\[x\]](#)

phonebooks [\[x\]](#)

history [\[x\]](#)

geneology [\[x\]](#)

resolved [\[x\]](#)

metafilterhisto... [\[x\]](#)

Add tag

Share:

 Twitter

 Facebook

I just spke with a researcher here (I work at the Holocaust Museum in Washington) and I think we might be able to get the street address for you. Let me look into is a little bit...

Send me an e-mail with all the info you have (name, birthdate, occupation, etc): rcoleman \(AT\) ushmm.org.

posted by  arco at 10:54 on October 18, 2005 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[+\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

(To more specifically answer your question, we have the Vienna telephone books from the 30s on microfilm, but we also have several other resources that might be useful.)

posted by  arco at 11:11 on October 18, 2005 [\[edit\]](#) [\[x\]](#) [\[IP:whois|search\]](#) [\[user info\]](#) [\[1 favorite +\]](#) [\[!\]](#)

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And sometimes questions are more like reference questions. And sometimes they're answered by reference librarians. The guy who answered her, Ron Coleman, is the librarian at the Holocaust museum in Washington DC.

AskMe's Soliciting book recommendations especially loved AskMes of the broadest sort

- universal books
- how did you find your favorite book?
- what single book is the best introduction to your field
- vacation reading, but not too light
- perfect non fiction books
- books every girl should read (and the ultimate result of the question)
- books for boys
- great books more great books
- a novel from every country
- fantastic books for 2007 for 2006
- all time favorites
- must reads
- a book everyone should read, and why

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And there's a posse. As I said earlier I'm interested in the conversion factor. People make assemblages of our questions and put them on the wiki. We have a wiki where people create Frequently Asked of MetaFilter lists. Here's a page from the wiki that shows off questions about what to read. It has a thousand booklists. One thousand. Booklists. I am not one of those people like Library Thing or the Internet Archive who is all "Hey we're just as good as a library with no books!" but there are some aspects to what we do that are similar.

My subset of the Library of Congress

October 1, 2010 10:32 PM  Subscribe

I'd like to put a personal library of around 200 books in order by the Library of Congress Classification System. I plan to take them off my shelves then scan all of their ISBNs for inclusion on LibraryThing... Then what? How do I get LCC numbers from ISBN numbers for ordering/labeling? How should I label them?

FWIW, I own an inkjet printer.

posted by phrontist to computers & internet (5 comments total) [edit] [IP:whois|search] [add to favorites] 9 users marked this as a favorite [!]

How old are your books, many include the Call Number on the verso page, the page after the title page with other cataloging information, and where you'd likely look for the ISBN in the first place.

posted by dipolemoment at 10:39 PM on October 1 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

LibraryThing will probably recognize all of your books if they have ISBNs, and the details pages for them will include the LC numbers. LibraryThing searches hundreds of libraries around the world to find details and grabs LC and Dewey numbers. The Cataloging-in-Publication data on the title page verso is the easiest place to find LC numbers, and most new North American books have that. You can always search the Library of Congress catalogue yourself, too.

As for labelling, I did it by hand with Avery 02207 labels. They look fine. You could always use a label template, though. If you get dust jacket protectors from Brodart or a similar library supplies company then your books will look all the nicer, and you can tape the labels on.

posted by wdenton at 10:49 PM on October 1 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

Oddly, the export option doesn't seem to return LCC numbers, but they can be seen in the details view.

posted by phrontist at 10:52 PM on October 1 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

LibraryThing puts books into your library by matching the provided info (like the ISBN) against a data source (amazon, libraries, the library of congress), grabbing all the fields from the record found in that data source (title, author, LCC, etc.) and then using those fields to make a LibraryThing record.

When you enter your books, use a reputable library (LoC, even!) as the data source (the Search Where? bit in the Add Books page). Amazon does not track LCC numbers, so if you use that as a source, your books will not have that info.

Once your books are in, complete with LCC, edit your view style to include LCC numbers, sort by LCC, and shelve accordingly.

posted by zamboni at 11:01 PM on October 1 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

You can also look at worldcat.org for the loc number, and I also have used openlibrary.org but they don't have the range of books that worldcat does.

In one of the school libraries I worked at I used a ptouch labeler for labeling my books. It was quick and easy.

posted by momochan at 6:45 AM on October 2 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

Tags:

lcc [x]

isbn [x]

library [x]

organisation [x]

personal [x]

Add tag

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Not surprisingly, we have a lot of librarians that interact there. Thanks to a script that works in conjunction with Firefox and Greasemonkey, you can tell who they are when you browse the site. This is a real "outside the box" sort of thing and it makes me happy to see so many librarians, over 230 librarians, library workers and library students. If you're interested, drop me an email, I'm always trying to sneak more librarians in. Free accounts to librarians. You have to put up with a lot of internet people, they're usually not any worse than your standard patron, but they have their own quirks.

My subset of the Library of Congress

October 1, 2010 10:32 PM Subscribe

I'd like to put a personal library of around 200 books in order by the Library of Congress Classification System. I plan to take them off my shelves then scan all of their ISBNs for inclusion on LibraryThing... Then what? How do I get LCC numbers from ISBN numbers for ordering/labeling? How should I label them?

FWIW, I own an inkjet printer.

posted by phrontist to computers & internet (5 comments total) [edit] [IP:whois|search] [add to favorites] 9 users marked this as a favorite [!]

Tags:

lcc [x]

isbn [x]

library [x]

organisation [x]

personal [x]

Add tag

How old are your books, many include the Call Number on the verso page, the page after the title page with other cataloging information, and where you'd likely look for the ISBN in the first place.

posted by dipolemoment at 10:39 PM on October 1 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

LibraryThing will put hundreds of libraries in the easiest place to find.

As for labelling, I used a Brodart or a similar labeler.
posted by wdenton at

Oddly, the export feature posted by phrontist at

You can also look at worldcat.org for the loc number. Worldcat searches the verso is the best place to look for yourself, too.

In one of the school libraries I worked at I used a ptouch labeler for labeling my books. It was quick and easy.

posted by momochan at 6:45 AM on October 2

LibraryThing puts books into your library by matching the provided info (like the ISBN) against a data source (amazon, libraries, the library of congress), grabbing all the fields from the record found in that data source (title, author, LCC, etc.) and then using those fields to make a LibraryThing record.

When you enter your books, use a reputable library (LoC, even!) as the data source (the Search Where? bit in the Add Books page). Amazon does not track LCC numbers, so if you use that as a source, your books will not have that info.

Once your books are in, complete with LCC, edit your view style to include LCC numbers, sort by LCC, and shelve accordingly.

posted by zamboni at 11:01 PM on October 1 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

You can also look at worldcat.org for the loc number, and I also have used openlibrary.org but they don't have the range of books that worldcat does.

In one of the school libraries I worked at I used a ptouch labeler for labeling my books. It was quick and easy.

posted by momochan at 6:45 AM on October 2 [edit] [x] [IP:whois|search] [+] [!]

Thursday, June 9, 2011

Not surprisingly, we have a lot of librarians that interact there. Thanks to a script that works in conjunction with Firefox and Greasemonkey, you can tell who they are when you browse the site. This is a real "outside the box" sort of thing and it makes me happy to see so many librarians, over 230 librarians, library workers and library students. If you're interested, drop me an email, I'm always trying to sneak more librarians in. Free accounts to librarians. You have to put up with a lot of internet people, they're usually not any worse than your standard patron, but they have their own quirks.

Don't worry, ma'am

I'm from the internet

IHASAHOTDOG.COM BY

Thursday, June 9, 2011

And I should talk a bit about "internet people." Just like people in Vermont are often "there for a reason" I think the same is true for people who spend a lot of time online. Not bad, to me, just different. I think we're shifting from a world where offline life is the only life that's seen as "real" but at the same time we fail to see that offline and online populations are different. One of my favorite classes in library school was services to special populations and I put "internet people" into a special population category. Here are a few differences that I've observed. REAL DATA AND ANECDATA AHEAD.

Some real stats

- ▶ 60/40% women/men
- ▶ 55% are 18-55 years old (avg. = 31)
- ▶ 90% visit once a day or more
- ▶ 21% “bloggers”
- ▶ 38% own cats

Some overgeneralizations

- ▶ Social anxiety
- ▶ Nerdy/High IQ
- ▶ Overthinkers
- ▶ Strong rule followers or benders
- ▶ Witty/Verbally clever

Internet People!

KEYBOARD CAT

Thursday, June 9, 2011

These are some of the things we deal with doing online Q&A. Many of these attributes are real good news/bad news situations. If you have a question about Ativan, we're great. A question about opera, maybe. A question about owning a fast food franchise, maybe not so much, but you might be surprised.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

I find that unlike the traditional reference desk, I spend a lot of time telling people not to be angry, or not to let their feelings get hurt. I spend a lot of time teaching people how to ask a good question, or talking to them about why their question maybe didn't go so well. I think a lot of us have a certain "What makes a good question" sense after years of doing reference, but it's rarer, I think, that we get to work with people, over time, over years, to help them ask better questions and get better answers.

Lessons, for now

- ▶ Count the right things, share your numbers.
- ▶ Be transparent. Share as much as you can.
- ▶ Metadata is findability.
- ▶ Kindness counts for nearly as much as accuracy.
- ▶ Reference is symbiotic.

Thursday, June 9, 2011

I am confident and comfortable that the world is not going to run out of questions and I'm tickled that there are so many ways to connect people and questions and answers and people. Thanks.

Thank you.

questions?

<librarian.net/talks/oregon>